Indipendent movie theaters

@lucycat241 • 4 mesi fa (modificato)

Three of our independent movie theaters have closed. One of them closed because of Covid and never re-opened. The others closed due to not making enough money. Another one may close because the building needs to make major repairs to its roof. It's really sad.

@lstevens_youtube • 4 mesi fa

True, the moviegoing experience is unmatched. Last night I watched "Weapons" at a Sydney independent theatre, and the cinema was packed, was full of shock and laughter, and the tickets were $13.00 because it was a Tuesday night. Outside it was raining, and there were massive lines for the cinema. Cinemas are here to stay! Thanks for the video.

@expressivekim • 4 mesi fa

What needs to be talked about is how independent theaters (and movie theaters in general) are more easily sustained in urban centers where walkable neighborhoods coexist with businesses. A huge issue with the closure of theaters and downturn of revenue is that the suburban American neighborhood just does not work to support business.

Cinema Village is an old fashioned small movie theater in the University Place area. Art and foreign movies are shown here. Tickets are $8 and the small popcorn is $4. Recently, I saw two movies and met the friendly staff: Anna, Lee, Patrick & Jack. The seats are quite old and one can sit anywhere. Restrooms are downstairs. The best part for me was that I took half the popcorn home as a small is quite big.

If you want to see some amazing independent movies than this is the place to go. This theater is so small that there are only about 6-8 rolls but that's what I think makes it so special. The ticket pricing is fare for NY along with the popcorn and drinks.

Grease - Good fun but disjointed

The props (fun fair, school setting was amazing.) Really fun. The actors did a brilliant job when they were brought into the different scenes.

However, I felt the overall production was disjointed. The movie wasn't played loud enough inside to hear it clearly. The performers were located at different parts of a huge space which means most of the time you were not really engaged with what was going on as they were too far away to see clearly. It was also confusing whether you should be watching the movie or watching the live performances.

It would have been better if the performers were on stage as in a traditional theatre setting so everyone was more connected to the show. You want to be able to clearly see the actors. The movie screens could then hang above the stage with the volume loud enough for all to hear it. The movie should also have been paused when the actors were performing their routines so you didn't miss the movie by watching the live performers.

The cost of food was outrageous. Three burgers and drinks were £70. Should have gone to Burger King before the show for similar quality food.

This is not a Secret Cinema as you know...

This is not a Secret Cinema as you know it. I was so disappointed, it's a confusing mash up of bits of musical and out of sync film which is constantly interrupted viewing to show the audience. It is nothing like previous shows, if you don't have a VIP ticket then you end up roaming endlessly around a small stage with absolutely no where to sit. It felt like the only thing to do was spend money on food and drink and try eating standing up. I would rather have spent the money on a ticket to see the actual musical.

Fantastic Experience

Firstly, I had a great experience with their customer support team. At first they were hard to reach but actually when using their chatbot on the website you eventually can send an email to their support team and they replied within a couple of days which was fantastic. I had an incredible experience with Alex, who not just helped me with my enquire but also exceeded my expectations and helped me with vouchers and booking me last minute onto one of the last shows which was so very kind of him. I really appreciated that.

In regards to the show, I went to secret cinema the stranger things experience a few years ago and that was absolutely incredible! I wish I went 3 more times after. The set up, the characters, the interactive scenes, it was honestly mind blowing and by far the best one for me. We recently went to the Grease show which I thought was super cute! It was a little less interactive than stranger things and the set up was different but we still had a fantastic time, the actors and singers were brilliant, the shows were so smooth and you felt like you were right there, in the middle of the movie! I thought it was fantastic. I agree it was a bit cheeky having to buy extra tickets in order to go on ride (everyone could have at least one ride/activity free I feel) but equally understand this is important for them to make profit.

Overall I definitely recommend Secret Cinema to anyone! It is such a unique experience and each movie/tv show they will do will be so different and exciting! I will definitely be back!

Secret Cinema has lost its soul

Having been to SC Moulin Rouge and Dirty Dancing we had extremely high hopes for Grease - how disappointed we were. The beauty of the previous shows was you were immersed in the film at the beginning, mingling with the actors, being set tasks and then being able to SIT and watch the WHOLE film and enjoy it from beginning to end. This time there was chopping and changing the film with the SC cast. (The actor playing Danny completely crucified "Sandy"). Too many screens and too many VIPs on stage, not knowing where to look and crucially , no where to sit. They crammed far too many punters in. Don't get me started on the money grabbing cost of everything as well (£6 for a can of coke - really?!?). And the beauty of previous experiences was you had to put your phone in a pouch. There were people with phones everywhere, especially at the end, which completely ruined the whole vibe. Sadly Secret Cinema has been sold to another company and it shows. It's completely lost its soul.

Really disappointing having attended the first Grease production in Bsrnes many years ago and encouraged my friends to attend this one. Similar to other reviews, has totally lost its magic. A real shame. Expensive tickets, rip off refreshments. Felt like a tacky convention. Will never be attending Secret Cinema again. Greedy, lazy, disappointing.

Slightly disappointed overall

I've been to the Dirty Dancing one 2 yes ago (I think run by different people) and was brilliant.... Was hoping for similar here..hmm.. it was quite mix matched in terms of some staff were in character others were not, the price included one ticket to fun fair attraction but had to buy more if wanted..played music outside but not same era as Grease.. The aesthetics were amazing, costumes brilliant, actors sang and danced wow ...however it felt like they could have been given more air time and while performing have the film playing on one or two screens and them on the bigger screens. Pockets of it were great and fun but something lacked.. I think the crowd could have dressed up more and joined it more as you felt the lack of atmosphere.

Disappointing

Went to the Grease experience, on arrival the queue was very slow moving took almost 20 minutes to get in. Bag check and my half a packet of skittles were confiscated 'no food allowed' that was pretty ridiculous hardly a snack or a meal. Once inside I was a little undwhelmed all the actor performances were ground level so unless you're 7ft tall you're not seeing anything, no idication of where performances would be or when so it was a bit of a free for all. One crew member approached me as my phone was ringing while I was in the queue for a hotdog to tell me no recording allowed! I'm answering a call not filming, found that totally unnecessary. When the film was on the crew were weaving in and out picking up litter which obstructed the view of the screen especially when two stopped for a chat pretty much in front of us, one of the group next to us pointed out we couldn't see and they walked off no apology. Found some of the staff working quite rude actually. The ferris wheel was an additional cost which should have been included. This was my first experience and sadly will be my last as this was far from an experience it was more a glorified outdoor cinema

It was so much fun

It was so much fun, you feel like an extra in the film, the actors were brilliant. Once you get the hang of what to look out for you get fully involved.

As expected at an event food and drink were on the more expensive side but wasn't unreasonable at all. Parking team at nec didn't update the digital signs so find car park felt like part of the experience lol but if a secret but we got there.

Honestly so much fun we just had standard tickets which were great, would have been good if all thing i.e. fair ground was included in ticket price but didn't dampen the day or experience. Honestly you have to do it's just fun.

My Vision Pro has replaced all my movie watching experiences. I've watched three hour long movies with no issues. It's nice because I'll start watching a movie sitting up in bed, but by the end I'll have the movie on my ceiling so I can lay flat

EDIT: I also have a Meta Quest 3, and watched movies on it too. It's a great experience, but the AVP is another couple steps above.

I have an HP Reverb G2 (don't buy one as they're about to stop being supported, but just so you know) and I periodically watch movies in an app called Bigscreen VR. It's a social app, so you can fire up a room and watch a movie with friends/others. It provides a film festival vibe, as usually fans of the film show up to watch it with you. There are some great people in there, but also some odd tribes so it may take a little while to find your people there and block the irritating children who will pop in and just start screaming for no reason.

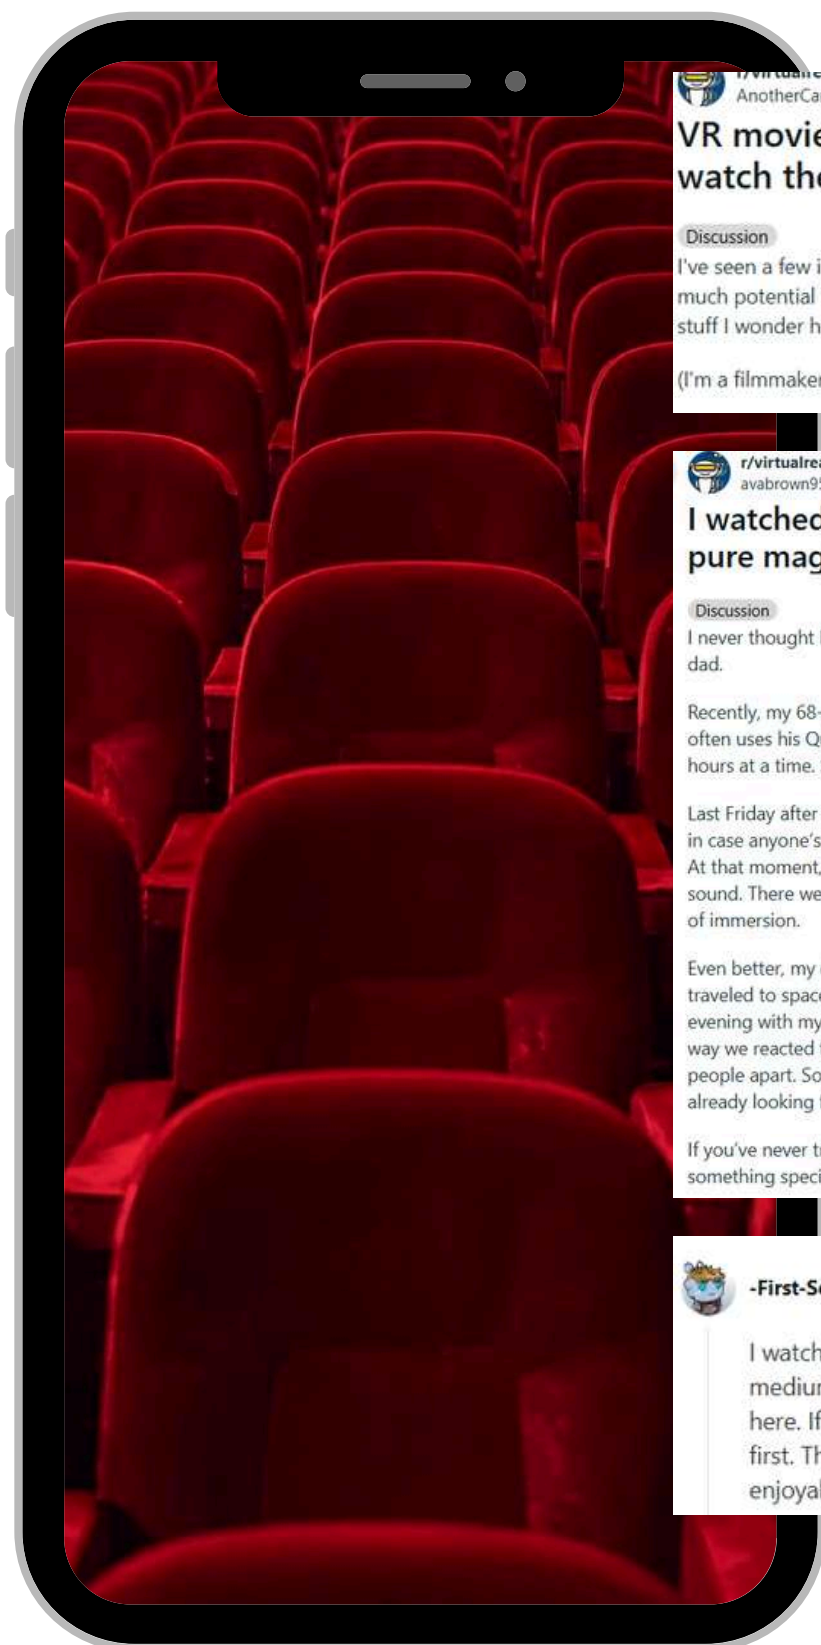

If you want to host a movie the best bet is to use desktop sharing and stream it via VCL. Also, a 3D movie in VR is stunning although it's hard to find/process 3D blu-ray's to watch. I routinely watch films with others who are in different headsets (a lot of Quest 3 users, some Index users). Watching movies in there by yourself isn't as fun as with a group. There are other apps that you can use to watch things alone, though (whirligig if you're nerdy, Skybox if not. There are probably others).

Movies are fine but the displays aren't quite sharp enough to do work like spreadsheets or word processing in there — that'll come in a generation or two. Newer, really expensive hardware is close but there are compatibility problems with some of those. Make sure the app you want is available on the headset you can afford.

VR movies... what's the consensus here? Would you pay $$ to watch them?

Discussion

I've seen a few interesting takes on fiction-narrative VR films, but to me most still haven't hit the mark. But there's so much potential there! Especially with how intimate of a space you get to experience the characters in. With this kind of stuff I wonder how many people actually care to see it/want to see more of that created/etc.

I watched a 3D movie in VR with my 68-year-old dad... and it was pure magic.

Discussion

I never thought I'd fall in love with movies again. And it all started because I just wanted to spend more time with my dad.

Recently, my 68-year-old father has become completely obsessed with watching movies in VR, especially 3D ones. He often uses his Quest 3 and Bigscreen to rewatch classic blockbusters, sitting in the virtual cinema for two or three hours at a time. So I decided to give it a try, and I was completely blown away.

Last Friday after work, I put on the Quest 3 with a comfortable strap and a solid pair of earbuds (they're called Vega T1, in case anyone's looking for a good one), launched Bigscreen, and played a 3D version of Apollo 13. At that moment, it truly felt like I was sitting in a private IMAX theater, with a massive screen and immersive surround sound. There were no noisy crowds. Just the roar of the spacecraft, the actors' breathing, and an unprecedented sense of immersion.

Even better, my dad was sitting right next to me in Bigscreen. Although we were in the same room, it felt like we'd traveled to space together in a completely different way. Honestly, it's been years since I've shared such a relaxing evening with my dad. We didn't say much during the movie, but the quiet moments, the occasional glance, and the way we reacted to the same scenes all made it feel meaningful. It reminded me that technology doesn't have to pull people apart. Sometimes, it can bring us even closer and create moments that feel more real than anything else. I'm already looking forward to our next movie night.

If you've never tried watching movies in VR, I totally recommend giving it a shot. Especially if you want to share something special with someone close to you.

I watched a Vr180 short series called The Faceless Lady on Quest TV. I didn't like the show that much, but the medium was really cool and sold me on the potential. There's an entirely unexplored new genre of filmmaking here. If 'good' content was filmed that way, then maybe I'd buy it. But there's many problems still to overcome first. The headsets are still too uncomfortable to wear and the content is still too low resolution to be enjoyable.

Immersive VR movies like Gloomy Eyes or the Spotlight Stories are pretty great I enjoy them and would love to see an actual feature like these not just shorts.

180/360 Stereo movies typically live action are kind of crap the cameras used to record these are typically not high enough resolution and they just don't lend to VR that well

Traditional 3d movies like are alright VR probably is the best way to view them in a faux big screen and the stereo works better in VR than the normal movie glasses, plus given they are still normal movies they can be watched in or out of VR is decent value.

Personally, I would buy for the first and third options.

Into the spiderverse, Dredd, Fury Road, And Avatar 2 where fantastic in 3D inside VR. For me a way better experience than in the cinema, i watched Fury road in imax 3D and it was... distracting, in VR it was awesome felt the 3D actually added to the movie experience

Any vr movie player will do, you just need the movie in 3D, either in blueray or... by other means.

I am thoroughly enamored with Blumhouse Enhanced Cinema, but you may not like its business model

Game Review

Just got done watching The Black Phone in Blumhouse Enhanced Cinema. I've seen both it and M3GAN already in theaters, so I knew what I was getting into as far as the actual film, but I still walked away surprised by the experience and with a bit of a lingering grin on my face.

I don't think I watched the original trailer for this app closely enough during Meta Connect. I remember seeing one fire/explosion effect over a clip of M3GAN that I thought looked cheap and corny, so I was worried that would be representative of the final product.

I didn't realize until I was first booting up the app that oh no, this does render full immersive environments combined with 3D effects. A lot of which are a lot more interesting than cheap explosions. The opening credit sequence of The Black Phone felt like one of those nifty music visualizer rooms in VR Chat, but with cool retro film effects.

It's like the immersive environments on Apple Vision Pro, but if I'm not mistaken, I think those aren't quite as dynamic. Maybe they have some effects like candles flickering in the Hogwarts Great Hall, but otherwise I think you're just sitting in that room watching a movie. This actually has specific effects timed to the movie, including a couple mildly creepy moments. I could imagine them doing something to fuck people up way more in the right movie.

Pretty sure one of the UploadVR editors said during their podcast yesterday they could imagine the girl from The Ring crawling out of the movie window and creeping toward you. I rewatched The Ring a couple years ago after not watching it since I was a kid, and it definitely didn't live up to my childhood memories of it, but that 3D effect in particular would probably be a great way to elicit that same childhood fear I experienced in theaters.

I don't imagine the graphics are as high fidelity as what you get on AVP, but they were still solid and created a fun atmosphere. There's a film critic part of me that thinks they distract from enjoying the film on its own merits, but I don't know, I think you can just view it as another separate and valid way of watching a movie that doesn't prevent you from watching it more straight up another time.

This is awesome and what I always wanted

But there is a big issue. Rent only. As usual there should be two options. Rent and own. I want to be able to pay and watch this multiple times and share with friends and family and I can't keep renting it every time I want to show someone etc. keep the rent option but add a purchase for the usual movie amounts and we're on to something. To go extra mile, let us invite friends to watch together in vr, vr is all about social. Having said that. This is what vr can offer movies and what I love about it. I hope more studios do this with their movies in vr. Cause this is what immersive movie watching is like and something you cannot recreate outside of vr. Good job on this. Hope more movies keep coming

L_teaa 9 ott 2025 alle ore 19:53

Majorly disappointed.

This app's marketing was very misleading. You are only given the option to rent (2) movies for 48 hours. You aren't able to experience this with a friend. It is a 100% solo, isolated experience. The app is also in a terrible state. I rented the Megan movie thinking I'd get to have a cool experience with a friend. Nope. I get to watch it alone, while the app crashes mid movie more than 8 times within the first 20 minutes of the movie. I have no interest in paying money to watch movies alone. If there is no social integration, why would I spend a dime? Majorly disappointed. I do not recommend this app.

Cool Concept, Disappointing Execution

I just watched the Black Phone. Besides the fact the movie itself is great, there were a good handful of visual immersive effects I found to be very impressive. I won't spoil anything, but the transition into certain scenes can be very cool. However, the app doesn't go far enough with this concept. I will say that a good 2/3 of the movie is still barren, with no effects other than the occasional basement virtual environment, which by itself isn't very impressive. I think it's super cool Blumhouse is doing this, and I think with enough improvement it could be something really special. I'm its current state however, it's very hit or miss.

Great experience

I get that people want to own the movies, Which would be great however, for the two offerings currently available. I really enjoyed this new immersive way of watching movies. My suggestion would be: Having a friend mode. even if you both have to rent the movie. allow them to sync the movie in real time. So much potential here.

Better than the theatre

It was very easy to set up my virtual room. I enjoyed the effects and felt it added a lot to an already good movie. I see plenty of complaints about it being a rental program instead of purchasing the movie, but I pay much more for a movie theatre ticket to see a movie just once- and this was much more enjoyable. I do wish in the future they would add a feature to invite another VR user into your virtual room to watch it with you, but it was still a great experience.

A glimpse into the future

Simply amazing. I feel like I stepped into the future of movies. I watched The Black Phone over the weekend. It's a very good movie, but I would have forgotten about it already had I just watched it in normal 2D. The effects made the movie so much more engaging. Watching a movie on the TV is going to leave me wanting more. I am looking forward to watching M3GAN. I'm dumbfounded by so many low-scoring reviews whining about not having multi-viewer or purchase options. Sure, suggest it, but don't downvote this amazing new experience because it doesn't yet have everything you could imagine. It's as if people time travelled from 2035 and are complaining that 2025 isn't as good. I almost never rewatch movies, so the inability to purchase yet is not a big deal for me. Maybe young people who don't have memories of driving to Blockbuster find renting a movie offensive? The only thing I would like added to the app is the ability to toggle the VR/AR modes manually in the settings.

The cinema is in a lovely location and it is not expensive for US standards. However the screen is small and chairs are terrible and the people are not polite. I didn't go for the movie, I went for the view of Acropolis at night. However you can get better views from so many other places by sitting down comfortably and have a drink or dinner. If you want an elite outdoor cinema go to Kifisia. The Thision open air cinema was a waste of time.

I went there with my partner for an 11pm showing of the new Barbie film starring Margot Robbie. We arrived half hour early and there was already quite a crowd queuing up, so I recommend being early as you can only buy tickets at the box office. We managed to get some nice seats. The drinks are very cheap, a bottle of water for €0.50 and beer €2.50. There's also popcorn available and additional snacks. The bathroom is very clean.

The experience is amazing, sitting under a starry sky in the summer evening heat with crickets chirping, nice cold drinks and a movie. We both thoroughly enjoyed it and will never forget it.

There was also a tiny cat walking in and out of the cinema, manoeuvring itself between seats and legs of people for the entirety of the movie, which was a cute little addition to the experience haha!

We checked their website, TripAdvisor and SantoriniDave's blog before we planned our trip here. They tried to throw us out by force, acted like narcissists, and had no sense of customer service - acted as though we were intruders, even though we were only trying to have a decent conversation - explaining that the information online was not correct. They didn't care and threatened that letting us in would make them «lose their jobs». I've never been treated worse by customer service before; If you are to go, prepare to arrive 2hrs before cinema starts, as they're not friendly with tourists or «latecomers» - no understanding; they're only interested in proving you wrong. Rip off night in Santorini.

Favourite cinema in the world

giu 2019 • Solo

When you come to Athens, do yourself a favour and go watch a film in this unique place. Yes, it is an open-air cinema, but it's much more than that. It feels like a beautiful walled-garden, with plants all around, charming art details everywhere, comfortable chairs & space, and the screen is large and the sound is very good.

All that of course, are mere details when you can see the Acropolis being lit up as the night falls, and between one scene and another, you can't resist but gaze into the magnificent Parthenon. A unique experience I highly recommend both for cinema & history lovers.

And a final detail: the cinema is run by the same family for over 30 years, so it's always a pleasure to come back and have a chat, and support their business. Not to be missed!

mag 2019 • Coppie

Ok. It's not the best I have ever been to but it is an open air cinema in Athens. How can you not give that 5 stars for 8 Euros? Honestly, just go. I wanted to go back the following night. The refreshments are well priced and the interval setting a trend I feel. The barman coming outside the beer hut for a fag was funny enough to cover the cost alone as were the cats walking around. Go. You'll love it.

If I could give this a zero rating I would. Terrible experience at the Brighton cinema for a special showing of Bat out of Hell musical, which wasn't cheap. The sound was terrible with only the cast voices coming through and not the band. This was highlighted to the staff and was told it would be sorted for the second act, that was why we stayed for the second act. It was not. Spoke to staff again and was offered a standard ticket as a way of an apology. I decided to refuse this and take it up with the customer service team. After a month this was their final reply "Thank you for contacting Cineworld.

In the event that you are ever unhappy with your performance, the Cinema staff are more than happy to attempt to offer a solution to where possible, provided that they have been informed of this during the performance.

Please be aware that if you stay for the entire performance, we would have to take the view that you were happy with the screening, and would not be able to offer a gesture of goodwill. Please note that in accordance with our Terms & Conditions, tickets collected in-cinema are non-refundable.

Unlimited good value

Our family all got Unlimited cards and they've been fantastic value. Easy to book as a group for each other on the app. The 25% discount for nibbles makes it well worth indulging in a hotdog or ice-cream. Staff are always very friendly at the Ashford branch & the screens comfortable & clean. My only negative would be charging extra on top for anything other than standard screen & being unable to add an extra seat to our bookings via the app. It displays a seating violation and having to leave 'x' number of seats between those occupied. It's easier to cancel the whole booking and start from scratch. Also read the small print of 3rd party offers in restaurants - in some the 25% isn't off the entire bill & only off selected items.

I recently went to a multiplex cinema and I was impressed with the overall experience. The movie selection was good and the theater was clean. The staff was friendly and the seats were comfortable. ### Worst theater around

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ August 18, 2023

I came to see a movie at Rosedale on 8/17/23 and I have to pay $14.50 for a ticket the $19.00 for popcorn and a pop now I dot. Have a problem with paying but for $34 the experience should have been great the popcorn is pre made in there bags or tubs and it just taste old and disgusting the theater it self was not the cleanest it was just a bad experience all around and I will never go back there

Rude Management, Ear Blasting Volume, No Warning Regarding Ear-Blasting Movie Volume

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ November 9, 2022

I've visited AMC Fresh Meadows 7 ever since it was refurbished with super-plush seating & expensive concession treats and saw more than 50 movies at that venue. My husband and I had the misfortune to pick a film and a day where the cashier didn't warn us that the volume of the movie we were going to see, Nope (dir. By Jordan Peele), was playing. We were 2 of the 6 customers in that particular theater (it's a multiplex). I was blasted out of my seat by the unbearable/intolerable volume level and the addition of closed captioning at the bottom made it impossible to stay and watch the film. Another couple followed us out.

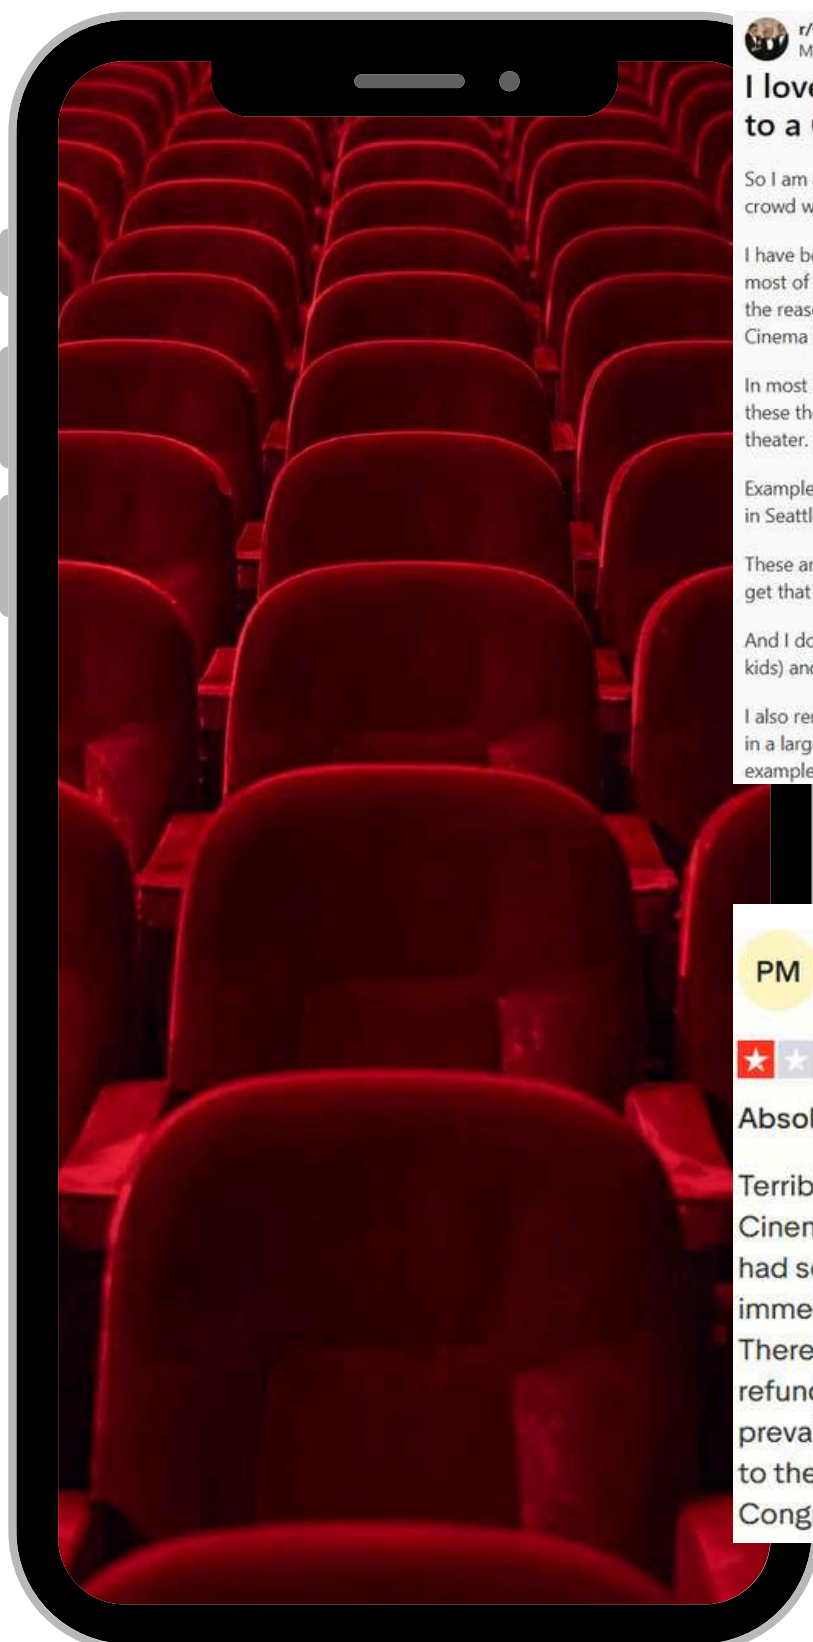

We went back to the cashier and questioned her silence about the eardrum-splitting volume and closed caption. She was unbothered and stated that 'sometimes that happens as if it's OK to spend $15/ticket to be tortured. We got our money back, but no apology and just a shrug when I asked her why she didn't tell us. There was no sign, no signage, no warning anywhere that ear-splitting volume and/or closed-caption was the order of the day!

I followed that up with a call to the manager who initially refused the call. When she did take the call she was combative, cut me off several times, was not apologetic and eventually - hung up. What little I did glean from her rudeness and response was that I should've received a refund and passes for another showing. I did not get an offer of any passes nor an apology at the time we were at the theater.

I love seeing movies in a Movie Theater/Cinema but I hate going to a Cineplexes/Multiplex

So I am a guy who prefers to see a movie in a Cinema or movie Theater. I love the atmosphere, the experience, and crowd when going to a local theater.

I have been reading some people's opinion about why they don't like going to the theater what I noticed I agree with most of their reasons (price, annoying crowd, sticky floors with food lying around everything etc.) but I think most of the reasons usually applies in large Multiplexes or Cineplex. I live in Germany so this is the equivalent to Cinestar, Cinema X, UCI Kinowelt and, in the US it would be AMC.

In most cases watching a movie in these kinds of cinemas are my very last resort (only when the movie is only shows in these theaters) and most cases I prefer going to local movie theater, a historical one, Indi, Arthouse, or a small cafe theater. The experience is usually more "homey charm" and special with the a less generic vibe to it.

Examples I've been to in Berlin are B-Ware Kino, Babylon, Kino International, Passage Kino etc. And I spent some days in Seattle and had a good experience with SIFF Cinema Uptown.

These are places that really make you feel like you watching movies in the way they are supposed to. You just don't get that feeling in the larger chains.

And I do feel the crowd is much better in these in these theaters. I saw The Little Mermaid in one of these theaters (no kids) and the crowd was great, I'd imagine the larger chains would have more children watching.

I also remember watching Spider-Man No Way Home twice. One in smaller theater and I had a good time the next was in a larger chain and there were a bunch of annoying teenagers making a ruckus the whole time. I guess this particular example is an extreme case but my point still stands.

Absolutely avoid. Terrible experience.

Terrible experience, not so much with the Rome cinema but with Space Cinema customer service. I mistakenly purchased four tickets online. I had selected Florence, and their system sold me Rome. I wrote immediately and at least four more times in the space of two days.

There was plenty of time to change the message, respond, and possibly refund or issue a voucher for the cinema in my city, but instead, silence prevailed. No response to the messages sent, but the promos for going to the cinema in Rome continue to arrive.

Congratulations!

Aside from the comfortable rooms...

Aside from the comfortable rooms, with undoubtedly good audio and video, at least in Terni, everything else needs to be reviewed, especially with regards to the online purchase platform for tickets, cards, etc. They don't realise the many unnecessary difficulties they create for customers; perhaps they would do better to take into consideration the many criticisms that are regularly levelled at them and which they have never resolved.

Unjustified increases based on what service improvement?

They've raised ticket prices in the space of a year and adjusted the price based on seat selection, as if we were at the theater. (Cheap - so to speak - in the front row, right next to the screen, and 12 euros in the middle rows, which used to cost 6 euros). So much for the cinema crisis! I think it's the last time they'll see me!

Terrible service

I was given a Space Card for Christmas, and I tried to use it to buy tickets for Avatar. Since the card was purchased at the physical box office, it wasn't possible to use it to buy tickets through the app, so basically, you have to have a card to buy tickets either online or at the box office. Also, for the film I chose, I could only buy tickets in the front rows, not, for example, the back rows, which are ideal for a film that's over three hours long and has tons of special effects, which, if seen from the front rows, would leave you with a terrible headache. I decided to see another film, specifying that I wanted tickets in the back rows, but no, they put me in the middle of the theater. Maybe I shouldn't have come straight away. I should point out that the chosen cinema is the one in Quartucciu, but I think that's a general policy.

I'd give the front of house staff 4-5 stars, but membership and tickets are expensive compared to other cinemas locally, also their customer services run limited hours or simply don't answer the phone. Awful website

The cinemas are perfectly fine and the prices are fairly reasonable but the website is hot garbage. No other online experience infuriates me quite so much. A third of the screen space is taken up but a useless header that seemingly just supports a logo, random banners constantly flicker in and out of view, and the website loves to make odd navigation decisions which cause jumping scrolling. Why is the website wasting space by showing me how great their food and drink options are in cinemas hundreds of miles away? The whole experience is very jarring and speaks to horrible UX design. I'd presume the website is Picturehouse's first point of contact with the customer, so why is it so bad?

Dec 2025 • Friends

Previous review was a year ago and it basically wondered whether it was all worth the price and bother of coming down here when so much quality and innovative art house stuff could be watched at home, but we went with friends very recently, combined with an excellent supper just up the road and it had a good evening all round. Then today we've received the Arts Cinema monthly email with the dozen January selections which contains at least four films we would want to see and show no immediate signs of being on our already broad smart tv package. So there is good cause to come back to PAC in the very early New Year.

Saw the wonderful Victoria Wood film with elderly and disabled parents this afternoon. Staff at Picturehouse, in Chester, were wonderful accommodating and supporting us with this, special access to screen 2 to accommodate mobility issues & supporting us as we hadn't got our CEA quite sorted. The cafe was a comfortable and calm space to relax with my father who has Alzheimer's beforehand. Well done all at Picturehouse.

Booking issues & poor customer service

My husband and I are both members. You used to be able to book 2 tickets together with two different membership numbers. For some unfathomable reason, Picturehouse has now removed this functionality. I tried to book for us both and 2 tickets were taken off my own ticket allowance. I rang up customer services. No one picked up for ages, it just kept ringing and ringing and then cutting out. When someone answered, they were rude and unpleasant, and kept talking over me when I tried to explain.

My tickets were refunded. We will now have to book again separately. Why on Earth would you make it impossible for two members to book together through the website? Why make your service actively worse? At the end of the call, I was about to ask another question when the person said "Goodbye" and immediately hung up. So rude! I am appalled by the poor customer services helpline and the uselessness of the booking system.

When my membership ends I will probably not renew unless Picturehouse changes this system.

Picturehouse West Norwood "Cafe" - Appalling!

60% 1 Star Reviews - I couldn't believe it until I experienced it myself! Picturehouse clearly don't care...

The female bar-staff member was rude and unhelpful: I had to ask for a tray, despite the fact that she watched me trying to carry cups and plates to our table.

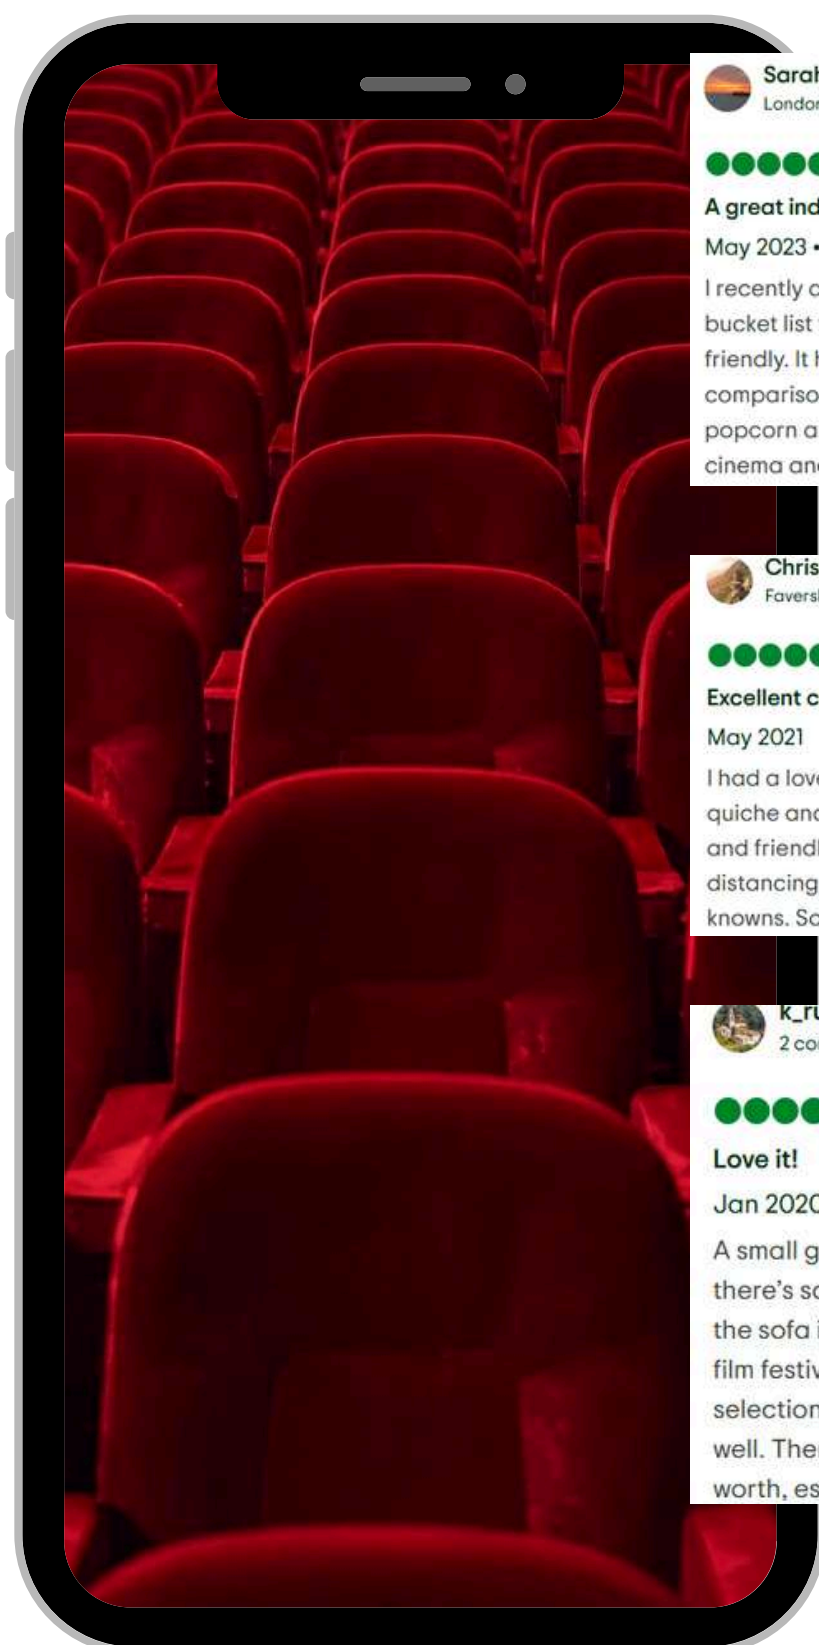

The table was dirty, so my partner asked for some napkins, so that she (my partner) could clean the table.

After telling my partner that the napkins were "over there", the waitress marched across to our table, which she proceeded to aggressively spray with some cleaning liquid which went into my face.

I have never come across such graceless behaviour in any cafe.

I recently attended a screening at Arthouse as I won giveaway tickets but it had been on my cinema bucket list for a long time before that! The screens were nice and intimate and the staff were super friendly. It had a fully equipped bar and I was so surprised at how affordable the snacks were in comparison to multiplexes. We bought two soft drinks, two chocolate pots, one sweet pot and a small popcorn and it came to less than £14. Definitely recommend a visit - especially if you like independent cinema and foreign language films.

I had a lovely afternoon at the Arthouse. Sat upstairs in the "room with a view" and had a delicious quiche and really tasty salads for lunch, whilst looking out at the Arthouse Angel. The staff were helpful and friendly. Even though the film had sold out, the venue felt safe and they had put creative social distancing measures in place, such as blocking certain seats with life size photos of film and other well-knowns. So glad to be back!

A small gem. It's full of character. From the moment you enter though the doors, to when the film starts there's something that is unique about this place. Whether it's the artwork displayed on the walls, or the sofa in the loft, or the seats in the cinema, etc. You don't find it in many cinemas. And as a lover of film festivals, I've been in many cinemas both throughout London and outside. They have a great selection of both independent and Hollywood films. And they have NT live and NOH live screening as well. There's quite a variety, something for every taste. If you live in North London do pay it a visit! It's worth, especially during the week!

My wife and I saw " I am not your negro " in Cinema 1 at the ICA last Friday . It is always a pleasure to watch a good film there . There are no adverts run before a film is shown so the scheduled time is more or less when the film you go to see begins ( apart from a couple of minutes previewing films to be shown there shortly ). Cinema 1 auditorium is very comfy and wasn't crowded this time . A reasonable film and very pleasant venue to watch it in .

Great service and platform

Do not understand what people are having issues with. If you have ridiculous slow internet, you're going to get lag and buffering even more so in a household with multiple devices using at once. You only need 500mps or more and it works perfectly. Never once has it lagged or buffered, also there are ZERO adverts, if you are receiving ads you're likely on a cheap plan that tells you it is WITH adverts. Again, that is your fault and issue. If you don't want ads, pay for premium, just the same with youtube! I think it's great, has a lot of shows on and every disney made show/ film ever made!

Dec 2019

Ordered a toasted sandwich and a pot of tea. The toasted sandwich was almost rock hard on one side and soft and soggy on the other side. As far as the tea was concerned I thought that they were playing a joke on me. I was served with a full cup of hot water and a pot of hot water with a tea bag in. I had to take the tea bag out of the pot and put it in the cup to produce a boiling hot but weak cup of tea. I will never use the cafe again.

I watched Avatar which is over three hours long so the premium recliner seats were the logical pick. Customer service was quick and friendly especially as I arrived with a few minutes to spare before the movie started. I ordered the Nacho's Movie Meal and was provided with a tray, which was very helpful for carrying the food and my 3D glasses.

The cinema itself was clean and the reclining seating was definitely luxurious and comfortable. The wide aisle between the rows of seats was spacious enough for me to make my way to my seat without bumping into anyone.

The toilet facilities were clean and seem to be checked frequently.

This is my go to Cinema as I always receive great customer service and excellent movie nights here.

Not been to a cinema for a while.
There are good reasons which I stupidly forgot.

1) The sound system is far too loud.
I know why ... it's because they have to boost the impact of a poor film( less is more sometimes... a good film doesn't need 110dB)

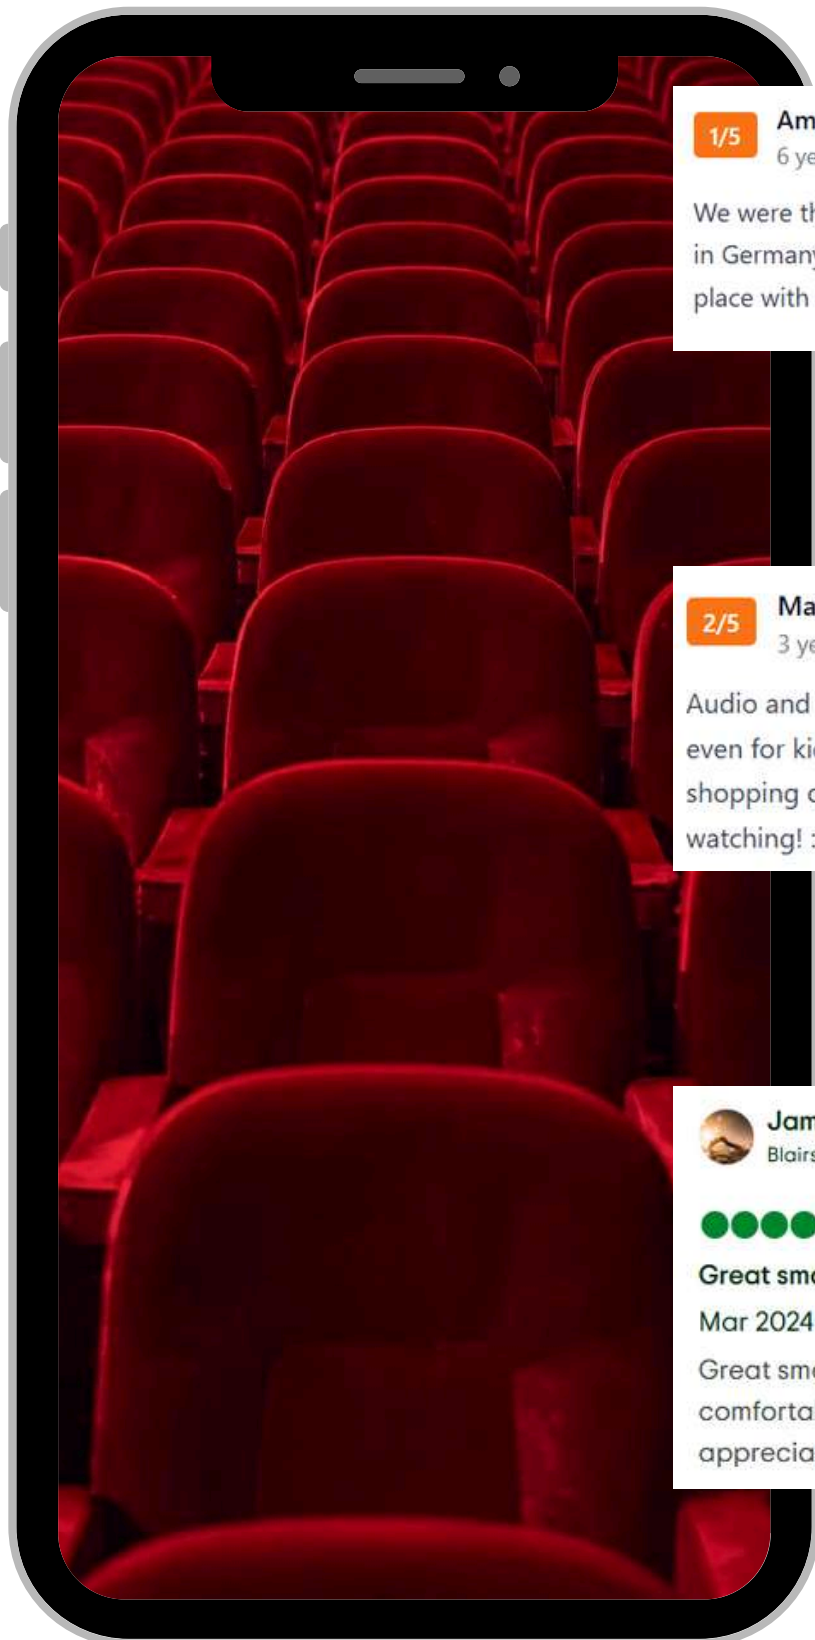

2)The crunchers and rustlers getting calorie fix.

3)The cost
